

More presence, less anxiety

The 60-second protocol + the 3-2-1 method + the RESET protocol

A simple way to occupy spaces with more confidence and ease, without playing a character.

What you get

The 60-second posture protocol, the 3-2-1 eye contact method and the RESET protocol.

No fluff

Real social presence — no promise that anyone will feel attracted to you.

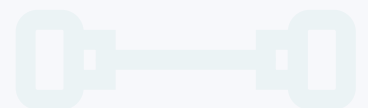

Before you start

This guide is educational and meant to help you build social presence — not to teach manipulation.

Core rule

Social confidence isn't about dominating the other person. It's being able to be present without having to force an image, pressure responses or turn interactions into games.

- This material doesn't promise that someone will be attracted to you, and doesn't replace psychological support when anxiety is intense.
- Adapt the examples to your context, culture and comfort level.

The 60-second posture protocol

The goal is to build a simple alignment before any interaction.

Step	Action
1	Stand with both feet supported on the ground.
2	Release the weight of your shoulders over 3 slow exhales.
3	Keep your hands visible, without crossing your arms.
4	Look ahead, pick a point in the environment, not your phone.

The 3-2-1 method for eye contact

The safest criterion is mutual comfort: if the person seems relaxed, the interaction flows.

Step	Action
1	Look for a few seconds while the person speaks.
2	Naturally look away toward the environment for a moment.
3	Return your gaze when you reply or show you're listening.

Voice, personal space, gestures, personal image, social calibration and the 30-day plan are all in the full guide.

The RESET protocol — summary

Five steps to lower tension before interacting.

- Respire: breathe in for 4 seconds, out for 6, for 5 cycles.
- Establish: feel your feet on the ground and drop your shoulders.
- Simplify, execute and take stock without attacking yourself — the details are in the full guide.

Ready for the full guide?

This was just the start. In the full Body Language and Social Presence guide you get: posture, eye contact, voice, personal space, gestures, personal image, entering social settings, social calibration, body anxiety, playbooks by situation, and a 30-day plan with a full workbook.

Being transparent: no guide can guarantee that anyone will feel attracted to you. The focus is presence, respect and ease.
