

FREE NEXTLEVEL GUIDE

First Signs of a Scam

The minimum you need to know to avoid falling for financial fraud.

A quick guide with the most common signs, the pre-investment checklist, and what to do in the first hours if something goes wrong.

The 5 signs that show up most in scams

Most financial scams repeat the same ingredients: promise, urgency and a third-party account. Recognizing these signs is the first layer of protection.

- A guaranteed return, or one too high for the risk. ☐
- Pressure to decide today or lose the spot. ☐
- A request to transfer to an individual's account. ☐
- A closed group with profit screenshots as proof. ☐
- An upfront fee to release a balance or profit. ☐

Golden rule

Scammers sell urgency. A protected investor buys time: pause, verify, confirm through an official channel, and only then decide.

Quick checklist before investing

- | | |
|--|--------------------------|
| I typed the official site, I did not use a received link. | ☐ |
| I confirmed the destination account belongs to the institution, not an individual. | ☐ |
| The offer does not promise a guaranteed return. | ☐ |
| I have a second opinion from someone I trust. | ☐ |
| I kept documents and receipts. | ☐ |

Blocking rule

If the person says you cannot consult anyone, or that you will lose everything if you wait, consider the offer unsuitable until proven otherwise.

If you already fell for it: the first 24 hours

- Stop new transfers and conversations with suspects. ☐
- Enter the bank's official app/channel and report the fraud. ☐
- Change passwords if data was leaked. ☐
- Save screenshots, links, receipts and protocol numbers. ☐
- File a police report and complaints through applicable channels. ☐

Important

Never pay a second fee promising to recover the amount. Recovery scams tend to target already-vulnerable victims.

3 simple digital barriers

Strong, unique password

Use a different password for each important account, stored in a trusted manager.

2FA active

Enable two-factor authentication on email, banking and brokerage.

This guide covers the basics. To fully understand pyramids, Ponzi schemes, fake brokers, social engineering, instant-payment fraud, fake invoices, and build a complete 30-day shielding plan, the full guide "Financial Safety & Scams" brings the detailed step by step.

Want the complete method?

The "Financial Safety & Scams" guide has 54 pages with the complete scam map, a risk matrix, checklists by fraud type, ready-to-use workbooks and a 30-day shielding plan.

See the complete guide